How education providers can respond? (20mins)

What level of education?

Difference between entrepreneurship education and education for being entrepreneurial. The second should be part of every curriculum, the first in specific ones.

Is there a difference between VET, bachelor and master level? And is there a difference between courses in research universities and universities of applied sciences?

How? What type of actions?

Who can undertake this task?

Recommendations to address the gaps. (15mins)

Collect evidence on effects of sustainable entrepreneurship education - including Feedback and successful actions of Alumni!!

involve more entrepreneurs

Be specific about what you are talking about: entrepreneurial thinking - becoming entrepreneur - improving employability (in a growing sector)

data base of successful examples, case studies

involvement of policy makers and investors

A complex entrepreneurial frame, very often contains a number of paths which the have independent sustainability criteria. Sometimes, the sustainability criteria of one path conflicts with those of another. The challenge therefore is to deal with this development in a holistic way we need good and motivated teachers able to convey the mindset!

Evidence says, the teacher and his/her mindset matters (maybe the teacher really needs to be entrepreneurial by themselves) - not so much training, but more about the development of their "mindset" also ;-) we still suffer a lot from too much managerial (hierarchical?) thinking, at almost all levels of higher education!

projects encouraging transfer of good practice peer learning and mutual learning

peer review and mutual learning among entrepreneurs
